5. <http://www.digitalliteracy.gov/>; This is the destination for digital literacy resources and collaboration. Use it to share and enhance the tools necessary to learn computer and Internet skills needed in today's global work environment.
6. <http://digitalearning.org/>; Digital Learning Daily is a blog focused on instructional technologies and technologies in popular culture. Often these are one in the same. The author is an instructional technologist working at a small liberal arts college in the south.

While the focus is supporting faculty in the performing arts with technology, I am interested in nearly all aspects of technology and have an appreciation for the sciences and humanities. I hope other instructional technologists or those with similar interests as my own will find the site a useful resource.
